Score. the report follows the education teacher training awards, etc. After the inspection, Ofsted said: Teaching is very effective and well matched to children's needs. As a result, students have made very strong and sustainable progress – this also applies to students with special needs and disadvantaged students. Expectations of what students can achieve are high. We make every effort to provide students with basic skills in reading, writing and mathematics and then challenge them to achieve a high degree. High quality math teaching is evident in the school and our students are confident mathematicians whose progress in this topic is excellent. Reading is also strong in the school and phonix is taught very well from an early age. The creative curriculum, with a musical and dramatic scene, makes a significant contribution to students' attitudes to learning attitudes and a positive impact on how well they do. This is recognised at national and international level, with an approach that attracts a very positive interest. Students' attitudes to learning are exemplary—they are excited about their lessons and eager to learn. They're proud of their work. Behavior is also exemplary in and out of lessons. The students are proud to be part of the Feversham community and are extremely polite and polite. The school is a caring, caring and happy place, with students playing happily together in the playground. They enjoy each other's company and make sure they don't hurt or offend each other. Mr Navied's nomination was the icing on the cake for Barkerend's school, which is part of the Academies Enterprise Trust. He said: This is a moment of immense joy, pride and humility for Feversham to be appreciated exceptionally. Primary education should be the most joyful, memorable and transformative period of every child's life. I am honored to be surrounded by extraordinary people who accept this as a symbol of faith. Arts and culture are the basis of academic success and well-being. It's a pleasure to be awarded Director of the Year award. All this is thanks to the wonderfully talented team at Feversham, who strive day after day to bring happiness, joy and light to everyone around them. Their faith in putting children first has allowed Fesham to gain national recognition for an avant-garde curriculum rooted in arts and culture. I am truly humbled and grateful to have so many amazing people on my team and to be part of the Academy Trust, which gives everyone a vision to find their remarkable ones.
